To Whom It May Concern,

I have produced concerts in and around Miami and Miami Beach for 6 years. The Miami Marine Stadium could be a perfect size venue for many events that come into the market that are either too small for the American Airlines Arena and Bayfront Park, or too large for the James L. Knight Center. The site will also give some degree of protection from the elements. The setting is incredibly unique and something that should be preserved as a multi-purpose facility.

If a stage and performance component could become part of a new design it would be the kind of place that the artist community would want to play and the audience want to attend such as other unique facilities like Red Rocks in Colorado or The Gorge in Washington state.

Sincerely,

Art Edelstein
